

Liverpool City Region Built Environment Board

Be A Voice for the Built Environment: The future of a sustainable built environment is key to the success of our City Region as we adapt and change in line with local industrial and spatial development strategies, energy, transportation and the circular economy, especially with commitments related to climate change, air quality and the wider environment.

With the need to build homes as well as retrofit for zero carbon futures, how and where we develop will be key to growing businesses and communities as we transition to a sustainable future, whilst growing the sectors involved in construction and development.

How we shape 'place', how we regenerate, buildings, neighbourhoods and communities in our City Region will play an essential role, especially with emerging socio-economic, technological and environmental trends that will influence the built environment of the future.

We are keen to hear from individuals from construction, real estate and property development specialists, large and small, as well as engineers, planners, architects, foresight and future studies specialists as well as anyone involved in sustainable building, including academics and practitioners.

A breakdown of the areas of expertise sought is listed below for guidance but this is not exhaustive and interest is welcomed from those with informed experience and insight outside these areas:

- Contractors
- Developers
- Architects
- M&E Consultants
- Structural Engineers
- Development Finance/Legals
- Procurement
- Planners
- House Builders
- Public Sector
- Training/Education

Key Attributes Sought

- Understanding of Built Environment and its operation locally, nationally and internationally
- Extensive experience of Built Environment agendas, especially within the disciplines outlined above
- Have strong, professional networks within the Built Environment
- Excellent communication skills and willingness to share ideas and experiences
- Passion, vision and commitment to developing the Built Environment within the LCR economy

- Ability to balance existing commitments with active board participation, including attending meetings.

Diversity

It has been widely demonstrated that Boards are much more effective if they represent the diversity of the customers and communities they serve. Liverpool City Region LEP is committed to ensuring all its Boards are diverse and actively welcomes and supports applications from all our community with the expertise and ambition to inform each of our sub-boards.
